

Hedberg's Sustainable Landscaping Day Thursday, March 11, 2010

Earle Brown Heritage Center, Brooklyn Center, Minnesota
7:30 am – 4:30 pm (Price includes continental breakfast and lunch)

Why?

Although we live in the Land of 10,000 Lakes, according to monitoring by the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency, about 40% of Minnesota's lakes and streams are impaired by conventional pollutants.

For the enjoyment of our generation, our grandchildren and generations yet to come, we have to stop this alarming trend.

Good news is, we can, and it can benefit your business. There's so much YOU – as a landscape professional - and all of us as property owners - can do to minimize stormwater runoff and improve its quality.

Installing raingardens, permeable pavers, rain barrels and the RainXchange™ rainwater harvesting system can dramatically reduce and improve stormwater runoff. Use of phosphorus-free fertilizers and organic pest control will help. Native shoreline plantings help filter out contaminants before they reach our waters. Trees help draw water down into the subsoil.

Combining these practices is even more exciting! Attend March 11 and hear:

Ken Grieshaber, Senior Associate, SRF Consulting Group and Landscape Architect Consultant on Silverwood Park, St. Anthony Village, MN	Ken will narrate a 45 minute power point presentation on Three Rivers Park District's "green gem" – Silverwood Park which features raingardens, buried cisterns, permeable paver parking lot and much more.
Jill Robertson, Aquascape's Upper Midwest Territory Sales Manager	Jill will speak on Aquascape's new RainXchange™ water harvesting system and use of rain barrels.
Al Pfannenstein, National Hardscape Account Manager, Belgard Hardscapes	How to select, install and understand permeable interlocking concrete pavers. This one hour seminar qualifies for 1 Learning Unit (1 LU) with AIA.
Metro Blooms representative	Speaking on selecting and installing raingardens
Blue Thumb representative	Speaking on shoreline stabilization, restoration & trees
Tina Plant, Chief Marketing Officer, Hedberg Landscape & Masonry Supplies	Speaking on Blue Community Makeover™ Day (mid-June, 2010 in south Minneapolis) and how YOU can be empowered to work with communities in your area in the quest for clean water.

Tickets are $30.00/each in advance and $35.00/each at the door.
